

Jessica Falcon

Raised in Trumbull, CT, now an undergraduate student at Drexel University studying Biomedical Engineering with a concentration in Tissue Engineering and Biomaterials. Currently working on a tissue engineered thymic model that sustains tcell development and functionality. The goal is to make an artificial thymus that can be used to help patients that are suffering from HIV/auto-immue syndromes.